A Snapshot Update Of Our Programs in Nepal

Hello to All Our Supporters!

We want to give you a quick update on all the work that the NGN teams have accomplished on the ground in Nepal to change the lives of so many children!

All of us at NGN have the same strong desire to remove kids from their abusive situations and bring them back home to their families. We go to great lengths to stop kids from falling asleep at night wondering if their parents will ever come and take them away from the nightmare they are living with.

Breaking News!

THANK YOU to all of our supporters! We have reached our fundraising and matching funds goal! NGN has rescued 28 children over the last month. These kids were in very bad shape- abused, scared, hungry and physically unwell.

Because of your generosity, we supported the government in rescuing these children. The Government of Nepal takes child trafficking very seriously. NGN collaborates with the government by receiving these children and providing a nurturing and safe place to stay while we search to find their families. It is your support that makes a rescue, caring for the children and reunifying them with their families possible.

Rescue, Reunification and Monitoring

NGN has reconnected 615 children with their families since we started in 2007. Many of the children trafficked to Kathmandu were turned into "paper orphans", meaning that false records were created in a false name by the trafficker to portray the child as also having deceased parents. These children believe they have no family. When they are finally rescued they are severely damaged physically and emotionally. It takes months to build trusting relationships with them.

When a child is separated from his or her parents at a young age, there isn't the opportunity to develop essential developmental skills. They have had no long-term care givers, which is critical for a child's development. Only in returning a child to his/her family are they able to feel safe, loved and cared for. NGN provides the emotional support to trust again. Within hours of returning home, there is renewed friendships, games, sharing and love. NGN has nurtured, hundreds of children, and its success is the number of youth who have matured into adults and have been provided education opportunities to attend college and trade schools and recover from abuse at the hands of traffickers.

Family tracing is one of the first steps of the reintegration process. We search throughout rural Nepal for the parents of rescued children. Here you see the incredible moment when a mother sees her children's photos after many years of separation.

After being rescued in June, Aedesh is back in his village with his family where he belongs. He is busy doing well in school and happily helping out his family whenever he can.

Sabin was rescued from a corrupt orphanage in March and is now doing great! Here he is back at home with his aunt and is clearly very happy.

Conor Returns to Nepal!

Conor was back in Nepal in January!

Here he is visiting with our staff in the Kathmandu office.

Meeting with the US Ambassador to Nepal

Samjyor, NGN's Country Director, and Conor meeting with the US Ambassador to Nepal. A very fruitful visit as they discussed NGN's contributions to Nepal and the support and trust that the US Embassy has in our work and the influence that NGN's case studies had with the State Departments Report on "Trafficking in Persons - The TIP report."

Little Princes Reunion!

How often does a founder of an organization visit those he has benefited?

13 years later, Conor Grennan, the Founder of NGN and author of "Little Princes" visits Nepal for the 2nd time in three years to spend time with these youth, the "Little Princes", who have blossomed into amazing young adults and are still part of NGN's programs. This friendship and trust is more than just a "sponsorship", this relationship is "family".

Our Amazing Advocacy!

Advocacy and education reduces and ultimately stops the trafficking of children. We travel to the remotest areas in Nepal to perform our street drama on the signs and dangers of trafficking to local governments, communities, schools and parent groups. These performances draw all the residents of the villages we visit spreading the message about child trafficking.

Through advocating and education, we can keep more children from ever facing the horrors of trafficking in the first place.

These photos from the Humla District of Nepal where our actors travel to remote villages only connected by foot paths to present NGN's street dramas on "The Dangers of Child Trafficking". Prevention is the first step that we take in protecting vulnerable children and families from the horrors of child abuse.
